Today's US News

The World Health Organization anticipates a more transmissible strain of omicron to spread over the world, however it's unclear if the subvariant may reinfect people who have already been infected with an earlier strain of omicron.

Apple and Microsoft led Wall Street higher on Tuesday, as a surge in Treasury rates boosted bank stocks ahead of a crucial inflation data this week.

On Tuesday, Chipotle Mexican Grill surpassed Wall Street expectations for quarterly profit and comparable sales, due to rising demand and prices for its burritos and rice bowls, which helped the restaurant chain overcome a hit from Omicron.

Today's China News

Hong Kong markets fell for a second day, weighed down by heightened US-China tensions following the Biden administration's red flagging of "unverified" Chinese technology firms and tightening export restrictions on them.

Concerns over Alibaba Group Holding's proposal to register additional American depository shares caused Chinese tech stocks to fall in Hong Kong. China's services industry expanded at the weakest rate in five months.

During the Lunar New Year vacation last week, Chinese consumer spending on movies plummeted as cinemas hiked prices to all-time highs.
